President, Breaking Silence on Subject of War, Says U. S. Will Do All It Can to End War in United States, He Says, Will Move for League of Nations to Preserve the Rights of All

FOR INTERNATIONAL POLICE.
Inasmuch as the President indicated that coercion should be employed to accomplish the objects of the league, it was accepted that he favors, and will work for, the creation of an international police force, military as well as naval.

His statement was further interpreted to mean that he is disposed to abandon the traditional policy of this government to avoid entangling alliances.

The impression prevails in Washington that the President has accented the views of some, at least, of the other nations of the world on this proposal, and that the information he obtained was encouraging.

The belief is entertained, also, that his announcement will meet with approval in Germany. The German government has maintained that it seeks the "freedom of the seas" President Wilson tonight said that one of the purposes of the international association he proposes would be to "maintain the inviolable security of the highways of the seas for the common and unobstructed use of the nations and peoples of the world."

WORLD HOP FOR PEACE.
The text of President Wilson's speech follows the invitation to be here, tonight came to me. I was glad to accept it—not because it offered me an opportunity to discuss the program of the league—that you will, I am sure, not expect of me—but because the desire of the whole world now turns eagerly, more and more eagerly, towards the hope of peace; and there is just the reason why we should take our part in counsel upon this great theme.

It is right that I, as spokesman of my government, should attempt to express to what I believe to be

MARTIAL LAW IS CONTINUED IN IRELAND
Dublin, May 27.—Martial law will be continued in Ireland, it was announced today in the following proclamation:

END BODY OF WOMAN IN CHARLES
Wrecked Auto Nearby in Watertown Gives Glimpse She Was Hurled Out; Mystery in Accident

The discovery of a wrecked automobile on the brink of the bank of the Charles River, near the Perkins Institute for the Blind in Watertown, early today led to the finding of the body of Mrs. Austin Bluest of No. 84 Beachwood street lying in the river about twenty-five feet away from the demolished machine. A automobilist passing along the boulevard saw the wrecked machine and investigated. It was about forty feet from the Metropolitan reservation and badly damaged. On gaining the spot the man saw the body of a woman lying in the water. He notified the Watertown police, and officers were sent to the scene. The woman proved to be Mrs. Bluest, who is forty-six years old, and lives with her husband and two daughters in Watertown. Her body was badly bruised and cut, and she had evidently been thrown from the machine when it struck a wall, close beside the river. The number plate on the machine, according to the Watertown police, was Massachusetts 1932. This is a license recently issued, they say. Mrs. Bluest left her home yesterday afternoon about 4 o'clock for a walk, the police learned. Up until the finding of her body in the river she had not been heard from. The accident occurred on a Metropolitan Park Reservation, and the State officers as well as the Metropolitan Park Police were assigned to find out the cause of the accident and the other persons connected with it.

$50,000 FIRE IN PLYMOUTH BLOCK
Plymouth, May 27.—Pine tonight partly destroyed the Holland block, a three-story brick structure on Main street, and caused damage estimated by the police at $50,000.

The ground floor of the building is occupied by the Cooper Truck Company and the Morse & Sherman Company, clothing dealers. The upper floors are used as offices. Two alarm were sounded. The blaze started in the basement of the Morse & Sherman Company store.

By International News Service.
St. Paul, Minn., May 27.—The condition of James J. Hill was pronounced today as serious by Dr. W. W. Mayo and C. H. Mayo, of Rochester, and S. J. Gilliland of St. Paul.
The operation was performed at the residence of the "empire builder." In a bulletin made public following the operation it was said that he was suffering from an infection of the buttock and thigh.
"It is serious at this age," the bulletin read. "He is being carefully watched. The infection was opened and drained. He came through the operation nicely and is resting quietly."

BOSTON SENDS A STIRRING APPEAL TO THE NATION
Greatest Outpouring in the History of the City in an Appeal to the Congress to Prepare American Nation for Defence

Half a Million Persons See Parade, Which Starts at 1 P. M. and Continues Almost Six Hours Through Flag Bedecked Streets

The tramp of thousands and thousands of marching feet, the ripple of thousands and thousands of tiny flags, the earnest faces of more than forty thousand men and women and boys yesterday afternoon spoke New England's mighty demand for Preparedness. It was the greatest parade ever held in Boston.

The great parade, demonstration of New England's determination that the United States shall take her just place among nations, neither committing nor submitting to aggression, wound through the city streets through the long afternoon, and even the sprinkling rain that fell late in the day failed to halt the marchers till the last one had finished the route.

Exactly 41,379 marched, according to the figures of Albert A. Gamble, a mathematical expert, who from a position at City Hall, counted every person who marched.

This count included bands, officials, police and other individuals in the parade. Captain Richard Lawrence of the First Corps Cadets, an aide to Governor McCall, counted the number of lines of marchers with a counting clock at the State House. He counted 3,222 lines or ranks of men. At twelve to a column—the average number—this totals 38,664 in the line. But this figure does not include the bands and other bodies counted by Mr. Gamble.

But no matter how many marched—it was a magnificent parade. Major General Leonard Wood, who with Governor McCall reviewed the parade at the State House, commented:

"It was convincing proof of public interest in Preparedness. It indicated that the people realize the urgent need of prompt action."

"The parade was well handled, well timed and the organizations marched well. Taken in company with the New York parade, it gives a definite answer to those who say the people do not want a definite preparedness."

Lieutenant Colonel Beaumont B. Buck, U. S. A., who acted as Chief Marshal, said: "Everything went splendidly. It was a splendid demonstration."

And Governor McCall said: "Massachusetts and the whole country can well be proud of the parade." The great parade, to be specific, started at exactly 1 o'clock, and the last marcher crossed the finish line at exactly 6:45.

The first man in the parade passed the State House at 1:10; the last at 6:45. Thus the parade was in progress five hours and forty-five minutes; and it was exactly four hours and thirty-seven minutes in passing a given point.

It was the greatest parade ever commanded by an army officer in this country; and it was as well handled as any parade that this country has ever seen. Officials united in their praise of the efficient work of the police force under Commissioner O'Meara and Superintendent Michael H. Crowley, in handling the tremendous crowd.

HIGHEST PARADE CROWD.
For it was the largest parade Boston ever saw. It was estimated that 100,000 out-of-town visitors came in to see it—most of them by the Elevated. The total number of spectators was estimated at 500,000. Yet there was no accident, no arrest due to the crowd and only a few cases where persons were temporarily overcome by heat or excitement or fatigue.

New York's parade had 131,000 marchers. Boston had over 41,000. London drew on a population of 1,500,000. New York on a population of 5,000,000. New York had turned out as well in proportion to population as Boston. 41,000 would have marched there instead of 125,000.

Of the 41,000 who marched in Boston, perhaps the oldest was Major Henry L. Higginson. He marched with the Royal Legion, composed of Civil War officers. He is eighty-two years old, yet he marched the route without undue fatigue, sprited and inspired, as he led 10,000 others by the splendid and impressive event of which they were part.

Modern Dancing Causes Suicide of Pawtucket Man
Pawtucket, May 25.—Because modern dancing drove him out of business, Festus L. Sparkweather, seventy, of School street, this city, committed suicide this afternoon by taking a dose of Paris Green. His body was discovered by the landlady, Mrs. Grantham. Medical Examiner Charles H. French was notified and viewed the body.
Mr. Sparkweather was well known in the city, where he resided for many years. He conducted a dancing school and was an expert instructor in gliding dancing. Since the introduction of the fox trot and tango his business had failed and he was forced to close his school. Friends say dependency on account of having to give up his profession was responsible for his act.

MRS. FEARING, WOMEN'S MARSHAL, LAUDS PATRIOTISM OF PREPAREDNESS

SHOWING MADE BY GENTLE SEX IS A SURPRISE

Woman Leader Tells How Banks for Preparedness Have Been Constantly Increasing.

By MRS. GEORGE R. FEARING, JR.,
Chief Marshal of the Women's Division of the Preparedness Parade.

A splendid parade from start to finish, and I believe the Boston public will agree with me that there was no more impressive division than that of the women. I was filled with pride to be followed by these patriotic societies and by young women of such splendid physical fitness as the Sargent School girls, 200 or more.

Unlike many of the men's organizations, we as a group, especially the women of the Greater A. I. S. Society for American Preparedness, consider this parade merely a by-product of an extensive preparedness program which we have been carrying on for months.

Before the parade, our society numbered 2,500 and now we have at least 3,500.

DOUBLE PREPAREDNESS.

We are glad to be in this march for preparedness—both in the sense of our preparations for peace as well as for war. Our society stands for efficiency at all times, and especially at the moment of need when women are almost as much in demand as are the men at the front.

Among those women marching today are hundreds who have offered their services in any way their country may need them. They are prepared to make bandages, surgical dressings, extractions, they will tend the wounded, and visit in the homes where their knowledge of house-keeping and cooking will help to relieve the suffering families of soldiers at the front.

This division also stands for military preparedness and we who have come are sending them to Plattsburg and other military training camps where they may learn the lessons and obtain the knowledge which is of value in times of war. My own son will go to Plattsburg next year, and I am glad to have him there. We stand for military training in the public schools, and are glad to see that the leading private schools are adopting some sort of training.

SHOULD DEVELOP ABILITY.

This parade should not only represent preparedness for war, but for such emergencies as the flu and the epidemic. Young men should develop ability to help out in all kinds of emergencies. They should be able to run, swim, dig, and be hospital duty, etc.

As I understand this parade, it is a preparation in peacetime war, and it is made efficient the young who will be ready to all at once.

At present Mrs. G. R. Fearing is visiting all the churches of the city, enrolling volunteers, and finding out how well young women are prepared. Where there is a desire to learn more, to become educated in efficiency, opportunity may be found.

To me such a parade as this might, to have a significance greater and more far reaching than merely a call for a strong army and navy, although these should not be neglected. The literature at our headquarters on Brighton street will give us an idea of what the special Society for American Preparedness stands for a clear line.

As for an opinion of the parade as a whole because of its immediacy, no one person can have an adequate idea of the part of it, but it is, in my opinion, the most impressive march ever seen in Boston.

MRS. GEORGE R. FEARING, JR., who acted as chief marshal of the women in line for American preparedness.

Women Most Popular Feature in the Line

Sargent School Girls, Drilled to Perfection, Winners of Continuous Applause.

Nothing in the Preparedness parade was more impressive and popular than the women's large division, nearly one thousand marching with flags and banners. Continued applause along the line of march fairly indicated the favor with which the public received the division led by Mrs. George R. Fearing, chief marshal of the section. By her side was Mrs. William James, Jr., who bore a silted flag topped by an American eagle in yellow metal.

Of all the women two hundred well drilled girls from the Sargent School for physical training were the star marchers, and received one continuous ovation from the crowds along the full length of the parade. The girls were dressed in white duck uniforms, white caps, yellow ties and white gymnasium shoes, with stockings to match. Their marching was superb, and the way they wheeled about corners drew hearty and noisy approval from spectators.

MARCH WITH CONFIDENCE.
The girls marched twelve abreast with platoon files and captains at the side. They stepped in perfect time and formed close or loose order with precision and confidence.

Another feature which appealed to the sidewalk hostess was a large float containing Mrs. Leon E. Smith as the Goddess of Liberty and bearing in its front the motto: "Women's Ister Corps—Ladies members. Twelfth Patriotic and Preparedness thirty-seven years."

A group of women, some of whom were flag bearers, carried an immense American flag spread out along the line. These were representatives of the Daughters of Veterans. There were five platoons of women belonging to the Special Aid Society for American Preparedness with 141 marchers in each group. Among these women were Mrs. James J. Storrow who led the line before the parade, while waiting for the signal to start, drilling her platoon in place and power training for the signal to start, drilling.

WOMEN BUSY WITH AMBULANCE CORPS DETAIL

Volunteers Attend to Persons Who Are Overcome; City Hospital
Has an Exhibit.

The cool weather saved the various relief units, stationed at intervals along the route of the parade, from treating a large number of patients, but a few were taken to the unit of the Boston City Hospital suffering from minor ailments. The eight units of the ambulance corps of the M. V. S. reported six operations at their stations.

The City Hospital displayed a fully equipped army hospital on the Common, near the Charles street mail. Beds which would accommodate twenty-five persons, and equipment to take care of 100 sleeping persons were in the tent. The staff consisted of four doctors, headed by Dr. H. M. Chase, ten nurses and four orderlies. Two ambulances were ready to go out. Other doctors of the unit were Dr. E. King, Dr. John Peley and Dr. J. H. Sherrill.

Nearby was a station of the Johns ambulance corps. This has the other branch of the corps, equipped with a full kit of first aid supplies, two graduate nurses and two men, trained by Frank H. Williams, representative of the corps, to administer first aid.

WOMEN AT STATIONS.
An interesting incident occurred at the station on the Common. The ambulance of the unit was summoned to carry a prelate person, and when it returned they were about to deliver the person to the City Hospital station when the nurse in charge of the corps interfered and issued instructions that the corps would work independently of other agencies. The patient was accordingly transferred to the bed of the ambulance corps. This station was occupied by Miss A. C. Hughes, assisted by Miss Mary McGovern and Miss Sarah Healy.

The next station of the corps along the route was at Berkeley street between Commonwealth avenue and Newbury street. A few persons with minor ailments were treated. In charge of this station was Miss Mary Peley, assisted by Miss M. J. Jones.

A vacant station at No. 23 School street, between Commercial street and Marlborough street, Mrs. M. E. McGovern and Miss Sarah Healy were in charge. No cases were reported at this station.

SEVERAL PROSTRATED.
A vacant station at No. 2 Broad street, also served as a station, and in it Miss Agnes Baldwin presided. At Fort Hill square a tent was pitched opposite the first avenue and Miss Mary A. Meyer, superintendent of nurses at Long Island Hospital, worked with two assistants.

An ambulance was posted on South street near Summer street and here several operations were performed. The remaining station of the corps was at Berkeley street between Commonwealth avenue and Newbury street. A few persons with minor ailments were treated. In charge of this station was Miss Mary Peley, assisted by Miss M. J. Jones.

The equipment at each of the eight stations of the Ambulance Corps was complete, including first aid supplies, bandages, and other necessities. The corps was recently organized by trained nurses who give their services free, and who, in time, would act as Red Cross nurses.

FIVE OBJECT LESSON, SAYS GEN. COLE

"I Never Witnessed Such a Sight in My Life, New England Is Awake," Says State Militia Head

By BRIGADIER GENERAL CHARLES H. COLE, Adjutant-General of Massachusetts.

Yesterday's preparation parade was the greatest showing of patriotism that I have ever seen. It was the first time since the Spanish War that the State Militia had been called out in such numbers.

When the men went away to the Spanish War, New England was at peace. Since that time it has been dormant in some respects, although New England should be the center of it. Yesterday's demonstration showed that New England was awake at last, and the very air was charged with patriotism.

I never witnessed such a sight before in my life. Everyone was full of enthusiasm for the parade, and there were many and almost unknown for the parade in that line of march.

The parade was a most interesting one. It was the first time since the Spanish War that the State Militia had been called out in such numbers.

Major Higginson, 82, Leads the Loyal Legion in Sprightly Style

Great Demonstration, Declares Major Higginson After His March

It was a great demonstration. It seemed to take hold of everyone. Young and old were everywhere. I noticed this along many streets. Kneeland street gave us many Chinese in line. Just as the Bay Back gave many women.

I did not have much time to notice every detail, though I tried while marching to take everything in.

It was a grand sight. It seemed to me at the end of the march that I could have walked farther, and I would have done so only Commander Morse gave the order to halt. And then I wanted to go on. I did not feel fatigued at all. I stood after performing my part watching the line going down Columbus avenue.

This parade will do good in many ways. I believe it made us realize what we can do when we set our minds to it. It stirred me all along the line. I thought I would be somewhat still, but I did not feel the exertion at all. I suppose this is due largely to the excitement of the occasion.

I really enjoyed it. I did try it again, if I had the chance. Boston streets are much better to walk upon than I thought they would be. However, they could be improved. That is evident in many places I went over.

Officer Commander Morse and I walked ahead of the others in the Loyal Legion. We had to turn around and just tell them to spirit up a little with us older ones.

Now let us hear some sensible advice about preparedness. I believe in peace as much as any man, but I believe in getting ready, and that's what this parade made evident today. It was a lesson from every class of workers that we can do something when we want to do it.

The parade will make people think and stop them fusing over peace, when self-preservation is the first law of life. I hope we'll have more parades of just this nature. The young people along the line must have felt we older ones could do something to keep them worked up over preparedness.

General Wood Pays a High Tribute to Chief Marshal Buck

General Wood, U. S. Army, commanding General of the Department of the East.

Lieut. Colonel Beaumont "B. BUCK" had the distinction of commanding the largest body of people that any officer of the regular army ever headed and commanded at one time. He did it with speed and efficiency, and there were no halts to speak of. He deserves the greatest of praise for his wonderful work as chief marshal of this big demonstration.

The people who marched in the big demonstration deserve the credit of the entire nation. They showed that they believed in the principle of preparedness. They showed that they were ready to stand up for their country. They showed that they were ready to stand up for their country.

These are the kind of people to make up the backbone of this great country of ours. They will all be required to stand up for their country. They will all be required to stand up for their country.

PARK SQUARE IS CENTRE WHERE MANY WATCHED

Thousands of persons witnessed the parade at Park square, where the reviewing stand of the chief marshal and the banding committee was located.

The Charles Barry of the mounted police led one of the orderlies to the reviewing stand, while sitting on a horse was taken down in Park square and was taken to the reviewing stand, where he was given medical treatment.

It was just 4:30 when the thirteen bands, half of the number of divisions in the army, of the First Cavalist band. This division was led by the divisional band, which was led by the divisional band, which was led by the divisional band.

'Parade Shows This Nation Is Patriotic,' Says Langtry

"NOTHING" that has occurred in my entire career has so inspired me as this demonstration of patriotism. It has been said that this is a commercial nation; it is proved that it is a nation of patriots. Should the need arise, America would furnish the greatest army the world has ever known to gain light for liberty, as America fought in 1776 and 1861.—Secretary of State A. P. Langtry.

Pure and Better Bread for the People of Boston

An Announcement BY THE WARD BAKING CO.

This advertisement is published in today's newspapers to announce to the people of Boston and vicinity that beginning tomorrow, Monday, May 29, we will use together with the other pure food materials used in making our leading and favorite brands of bread—TIP-TOP and DAINTY-MAID—the new bread making discovery—ARKADY YEAST FOOD (U. S. Registered Trade Mark issued May 9th, 1916), a preparation approved and protected by United States Patents Nos. 1151266, 1158933, 1158934.

This means that when the people of Boston and adjacent towns buy WARD'S TIP-TOP BREAD or DAINTY-MAID BREAD, they will buy bread guaranteed 100% pure—bread made by the most modern and scientific process and having very special merit as a healthful and nutritious food.

Why Arkady Yeast Food Will Make WARD'S BREAD Better

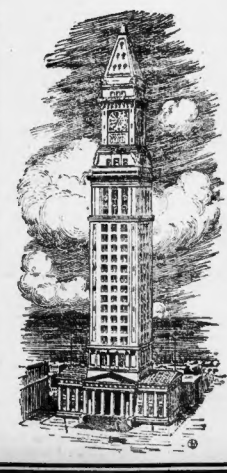

City water varies in different localities. In some places it is hard—in others soft, according to the amount of mineral salt, and this condition makes a marked difference in bread. The water used in making WARD'S BREAD is filtered to take out the organic matter found in all city water. Then to this purified water is added, in small and proper quantities, ARKADY YEAST FOOD, a compound of mineral salts, chiefly lime salts, such as are commonly found in natural waters. Because of this mineral content, ARKADY YEAST FOOD modifies natural waters to the best standard for bread making. It also reduces the amount of yeast required by more than half, thus shortening the fermentation period, conserving a greater proportion of the food value of the wheat, and producing a more nutritious and healthful loaf than can be made under any other known method.

This wonderful new process is the result of long scientific research and the expenditure of large sums of money. It not only has the approval and protection of United States patents, as stated above, but has the endorsement of eminent scientists and pure food authorities in this country and in Germany.

Try tomorrow this new and better WARD'S BREAD, made the new way—the scientific way—the pure and better way. You will find it perfect in texture, sweet and free from all yeasty odor. You will relish and enjoy its splendid taste and flavor and benefit by its body-building food value.

This announcement is the first of a series of educational advertisements which will be published frequently in all the Boston newspapers. Our next announcement will give additional reasons why WARD'S BREAD is better, different and 100% pure. Watch for these advertisements and read them!

WARD'S BREAD is made every day for the people of Boston and vicinity, in the Ward Bakery at Cambridge, where visitors are always welcome

WILL MELROSE SPIN 'JERRY' FARRAR'S BOOKS

She Gave Library to School Being
Razed to Make Park for Her
Won't Name in Honor of Her

Gertrude Farrar's name has been discarded as a title for a Melrose park, her friends in that city are wondering what will be done with the Farrar library.

The library, consisting of about 200 volumes, was donated by Miss Farrar, who lived in Melrose, Mass., and who died recently.

The site of the old school has been converted into a park and it was the park that Mrs. Farrar's name was suggested. Since opposition developed, the city officials announced the park would retain the name of Horace Mann.

The so-called Farrar Library was donated when Miss Alice Pratt was principal of the Horace Mann school. It was a great mistake, the veteran of which was to be used for the purchase of new books. Miss Pratt later became principal of the Church school and in her retirement, with the Horace Mann school was transferred it was announced that the Farrar Library would be given to the Melrose High school. Opposition was raised, however, and the Farrar library is now without a home.

'Look Before You Act,' Counsels O'Leary in Private Police Talk

First Informal Speech in Ten Years by Commissioner Who Is Guest of Boston Social Club

What did Police Commissioner Stephen O'Malley tell the patroness in his first informal speech to the Boston Social Club?

It was the patroness's own organization. No officer of the rank of sergeant or higher can belong to it. It was the first time the Commissioner, in his ten years of office, had addressed the men under his command. No reporters were allowed. What did the Commissioner say? He warned against being too careful about accepting gifts, especially from the underworld.

He told the patroness to be patient when under criticism. He said he was not a man to be easily offended. He said he was not a man to be easily offended. He said he was not a man to be easily offended.

- WHEN the largest Rubber Factory in the World,— —With a 47-year EXPERIENCE in Rubber-working, and,— —A 47-year RECORD of Business-Integrity, Good-faith, and Square-dealing behind it,— —Makes the following deliberate Statement, you can well AFFORD to believe it.

Here is the Statement:—

Money can't build BETTER Tires,—of Fabric-Construction,—AT ANY PRICE, than the
 "Black Barefoot," GOODRICH Tires which are Fair-list-priced below.

Dependable Tires cannot be built, and sold, for less.

But,—you WASTE MONEY when you pay MORE than the following prices for ANY Fabric Tire.

BLUNDERING OF BRITISH STATESMEN STANDS OUT IN THE IRISH SITUATION

Vacillating Policies, Unable to Reach and Cure Seething Discontent.

R. C. O'CONNELL GALVIN

It is not only the blundering of British statesmen, but the blundering of the British people, which has brought about the present situation in Ireland. The blundering of the British statesmen is shown in the fact that they have been unable to reach a settlement with the Irish people. The blundering of the British people is shown in the fact that they have been unable to reach a settlement with the British statesmen.

No Chance of Jess Willard Boxing on National Holiday

THINKING it is a possible chance of Jess Willard boxing Fred Fulton or any other heavyweight contender on July 4, according to Tom Jones, Willard's manager, they claim contract makes it utterly impossible for the big fellow to leave the shore to train at that time.

Willard's manager, Tom Jones, said that the big fellow would be all right for a big match, Tom Jones, and if there is a Willard-Fulton match it would have to be at that time or a little later.

CAGGIANO ACCUSES TRANSIT BOARD

Joseph A. Caggiano, president of the Columbus Republic Club, has made charges that the Transit Commission is employing alien laborers in violation of the law to do the maintenance of American citizens. He charged the commission with a violation of service laws by employing alien laborers in the transit department. Caggiano, who has had 15 years of transit work, having experience in the transit department, is a resident of Columbus, Ohio. He is essential for the position. He has asked Governor McCall to give him

ERMONS are tiresome, and this is preaching. But a million young men, and another million, would be more useful, more happy, if they could apply to themselves the sermon that is in this picture.

It tells in a new form of the old story of the ant and the grasshopper.

La Fontaine in his fable told it to the French and to all the modern civilized world.

Aesop, the Greek, of two thousand five hundred years ago, taught the story to the French writer.

And to Aesop the story came from Asia. Where the Asiatic writer got it we do not know.

But we know that it is a story as old as human intelligence, but always new and true—and here it is again. And you will not waste your time if you think about it.

Ant and grasshopper meet in cold of Winter. The ant is comfortable, well supplied with food, for she has been working through the hot weather.

The grasshopper, shivering, starving, begs for help.

"What have you been doing all Summer?" asked the ant.

"May it please you," replied the grasshopper, "I have been singing."

"Very well," says the ant, "if you have been singing all Summer, now dance in Winter."

The hard-hearted ant closes the door, ends the conversation and leaves the grasshopper who has spent the Summer singing to spend a few minutes of the Winter dying.

You young men who allow youth, which is the Summer of human beings, to drift by, working as little as you dare in Winter, working very little indeed in Summer, YOU ARE THE GRASSHOPPERS OF CIVILIZATION.

Later on in your Winter, in your old age, when the cold comes, and work and pay are hard to find, you will perhaps Summer Is Coming, Warm Weather, Temptations, Many Excuses for Laziness.

Here Lies a Young Man, One of Millions, Who Drowsily Tells Himself How Busy the Bees Are—And While They Accumulate for Winter, wonder at the hard-hearted selfishness of the man who has been working while you were singing, and who says, "You were singing, taking life easily, while you were young, now DANCE TO KEEP YOURSELF WARM."

The world is a great ant that has little sympathy for poverty in old age.

The grasshopper of the fable was more fortunate than old men begging for work, asking for a chance that is refused, struggling vainly to make up for days wasted.

Far better than cold charity and the poorhouse is the grasshopper's fate when the snow falls and the frost comes.

Young men who plan their Summer vacation, and wonder how much time they will have for idleness during the warm weather, bear in mind this:

YOU CAN BE ONE OF THE SUCCESSFUL MEN IF YOU WILL IT.

The successful man is one INDEPENDENT of others.

The man who is not independent lives and dies in slavery.

No matter how big your pay, if you do not make yourself independent by hard work, self-control and saving—independent of job and employer—you are nothing but the employer's slave. He owns your TIME and HE who owns your time OWNS YOU.

The man in this picture is one of the human grasshoppers preparing for an old age of want.

He watches the bees, sees them come and go ceaselessly, all working except the one queen that produces the young bees.

He knows that the drones, that do no work, are killed and thrown out of the hive by the workers at a stated time.

"Interesting little creatures," says he to himself. He does not realize that he is one of the drones, waiting for old Time, the worker with his sting, to throw him out and put an end to him.

The difference between a miserable drone and the worker in the hive is this:

The worker has a sting, the drone has NONE.

The drone is big, fat, good-looking. He will not work, and he has no sting.

When the time comes the workers attack the drones, sting them to death, drag their dead bodies out of the hive, and proceed with useful work.

Young men, the sting is to the bee what WILL POWER IS TO THE MAN. Man can add to will power by CULTIVATING THE WILL, and make the will drive him to work and to independence.

Imagine a man wrecked, out in the middle of the lake, floating idly on his back, and admiring the scenery, hour after hour.

You would say to him, "Young man, you had better turn over and swim toward the shore. Darkness is coming on, and you won't find your way so easily. This is no time to be floating."

To the young man in the hammock, and the millions of other young men, thinking only of the rest they have not earned, indulging in waste of time that means sorrow in old age, we say this:

THIS IS NO TIME FOR YOU TO BE FLOATING ON YOUR BACK. This is no time for you to be admiring the scenery, wondering how you can enjoy yourself and escape unpleasant work.

Winter is coming, and old age, which is the Winter of Life, is coming. Time does not stop and rest when you stop.

Life is a big ocean, and you are out in the middle of it. This is the time to get toward the shore, toward safety, toward AN INDEPENDENT FOOTING.

Which Is THEIR Old Age, He Forgets the Winter of His Life and Coming Trouble.

While Others Do Nothing Is the Time to Gain SUCCESS. And This Summer Can Be Made the Beginning of Real Success, for Those That Will.

Go to the poorhouse, to the parks where the miserable sleep at night, to the prisons, the insane asylums, to the men vainly looking for work, and you will see men who failed to swim and never reached the shore.

Now a few words for the man who is not idle, who has ambition. For him who looks upon work as the main thing, upon pleasure as secondary, the beginning of this editorial is not needed.

The time to gain success is when others stand still.

He who runs while others sit and think will win the race.

The warm Summer days are days of sitting down for the majority of workers.

Everybody runs fast in the BEGINNING of a race. The cool months are the beginning of the race of each year. The hot Summer months are the end of the race. Every race is won at the END, won by the man who keeps running as fast as he can, after others have begun to get tired and go slowly.

Let your young men who have ambition be among those that run as fast in hot weather as in the days of resting, of slowing up, of sitting down.

We do not mean that you should not have a reasonable vacation, if you can get it. But make it a sensible vacation. Make it all outdoor life, exercise, regular hours, careful eating, wise reading.

A vacation, reasonable in length, sane and intelligent in its use, is the most profitable part of your working year, adding years to life and efficiency to the hard working days.

Do not, however, imagine that a reasonable vacation means a vacation free from thought.

THE BRAIN NEVER GETS TIRED

One little part of the brain used over and over becomes fatigued. The way to rest that tired part of the brain IS TO USE THE BRAIN ENERGY THAT HAS LAIN IDLE.

When you go on your vacation, you make it a point to use the muscles that have not been working.

Make it also a point to use those parts of the brain that have not been working. Read good books, a new kind. Think earnestly on new subjects.

Question those with whom you come in contact.

Find out how THEY live—the real study of mankind is man, as you know. Study yourself, while you are working, to make sure that you are doing your best. Study others on your vacation, talk with them, question them, LISTEN to them, that you may learn from others, and from the thoughts of others.

When Darwin went on his famous ocean trip, he might have made it a vacation in the usual sense. It was a vacation, but it made of him a greater man in science, better, more useful.

He brought back knowledge and health from his vacation. See that you do the same.

Ambitious young men, you should realize that days of idleness for others are YOUR OPPORTUNITY.

You can succeed in life only as you succeed in a race, by passing others. And you can succeed most easily while the other man is sleeping in the hammock, drowsing, "floating" on his back, getting nowhere, not realizing that he is far from the shore of independence.

He represents YOUR OPPORTUNITY.

For this is a world of competition, and success is built on the failure of others.

An intelligent young man said to his father that there were too many fools in the world.

"Don't be too hard on fools," said the father. "If there were not so many fools we might not be so well off."

SOCIETY'S SPRING BRIDES

By MRS. C. H. WASHBURN

WEDDINGS, announcements of engagements and closing town houses seemed to make up the sum total of what was going on in society the last day of week just passed. Hereafter from May will be most of the Black Bay houses closed, and the owners settled in the country houses, and by June 15, the accepted date for the opening of the pleasure cottages, the summer season may be said to have opened.

Concerning the brides, Miss Harrington is one of the last of the notable group to celebrate their wedding in May. The ceremony will be at town and at the Arlington Street Church. Later three other prominent brides are to be a town, quite unusual occurrences at this season. Miss Lovett and Mr. Sturges is to be at Haverhill, Miss Parkman and Mr. Peabody's and Miss Rich and Mr. Storrow's both, at the same time, and also in town, will be one of the few brides, taking place at the Marlboro street house. Cambridge will be the scene of Miss Peabody's marriage, and Miss Thibault will be of the suburban brides, the wedding in Readville, the home of her aunt, Mrs. Wolcott. These town brides will bring many back from country and seaside, making the trip in these days of motor cars easy to accomplish.

The Chestnut Hill Horse Show, postponed last summer because of the Preparation Parade, the two Country Club races, and the day, which draw the largest crowd of young people of them all, are the events most anticipated outside of the weddings in the weeks to come.

Miss Elliot, the first North Shore bride of the season, had one of the few reasonable days for her marriage on Saturday to Mr. Burdett at the Manchester church. There was a great outpouring of society at the church and house, especially that part of it which has its headquarters on the North shore. It is to be hoped there will be the same weather conditions for Miss Rantoul's on Tuesday, Miss Hancock's on Thursday, and Miss Howe's, the last on the list in that region, on the 29th, which date also closes class day.

MISS GREENOUGH'S ENGAGEMENT

MISS MARY GREENOUGH, the younger daughter of Mr. and Mrs. David S. Greenough of Jamaica Plain, whose engagement was announced last week to Mr. Donald de Gramercy, adds another to the list of girls who came out a year ago last winter to become brides recently. The others are the Misses Margaret Lyman, Christine Snelling and Caroline Foster, whose respective fiancés are Messrs. Kenneth Harrell Gilbert Parson, formerly of Washington, whose mother, Mrs. William B. Parson, is making her present home in Cambridge; Leslie Wilkins Coleman of Chicago, and Theodore Blee of New York, all seniors at Harvard. Others of the group of girls who came out that winter are the Misses Gertrude Lovett, Margaret Ketch, Rebecca Lloyd, Katharine Whitcomb and Frances Clauser, all of whom are to be June brides. Mr. Edmund Middleton (Edith Elliott) of New York, and Mrs. August Vogel (Virginia Cummer) of Worcester, both of whom were married on Easter Saturday.

MR. HAMLIN GIVES DINNER AT CLUB

MRS. E. H. NASON HAMLIN gave a dinner for the new stewards of the Country Club at the Somerset Club, Thursday night, when the forthcoming meeting was discussed with such enthusiasm that it seemed easy to predict a record-breaking event. Mr. Hamlin's guests were Harvard Tuckerman, Jr., chairman of the racing stewards; Richard Mortimer, Jr., of New York, one of the new officers of the Virginia Hunt Club; Francis W. Sargent, Jr., Mr. Harry Lee, Mr. Gordon Prince, Mr. Thomas G. Frothingham, Albert C. Burrage, Jr., Charles S. Bird, Jr., Mr. John P. Howditch, Mr. Harold Baker and Mrs. Harry Smith of Worcester, all of them keen sports and members of the Myopia of Norfolk Hunt clubs.

The unusual interest with which society is anticipating these two new meetings on the 15th and 17th of June, indicates that that part of it will be as brilliant a success as the horsemen predict for the races. Mrs. Ambrose Clark, Mrs. Payne Whitney and Mrs. Joseph Davis, of the New York smart circle, will be a trio from there whose silk will be carried in a number of the steeplechase events. They are bringing on with them a number of friends and several dinner and supper parties are being arranged for them during their stay. These New York women are all practical horsewomen and personally take an active part in the training of their charges.

SOCIETY WOMEN IN PAGANTRY

MORE and more interest is being shown in the lawn fete and water pageant to be given on Saturday of this week at Weld's, the Brookline estate of Mr. and Mrs. Larz Anderson, for the benefit of St. Luke's Hospital, in Tokyo, Japan. Of the prominent features will be the water pageant, "The Religion of Youth," a sacred pantomime by Mr. Lincoln Smith, which will be produced under his direction. Assisting him in it will be Mrs. John S. Lawrence, Mrs. Hendricka Hall Whitman, Mrs. George Peabody Gardner, Jr., and Messrs. Stanley Parker, John Sweetser Norman E. Ritz and Harrison Gardner (H. R. Gold); also five Harvard men, members of the Hasty Pudding Club. Miss Pauline Mason will take the part in it of a nymph and will do some clever dancing.

DANCE AT COPLEY PLAZA FOR CHARITY

ALMOST all the tables were occupied at the supper dance at the Copley-Plaza Tuesday night for the benefit of the French Orphan, arranged by Mrs. Everts of Brookline. Although it was rather late in the season for any such occasion, society had a fair representation. Among those there, who are especially interested in this charity, and who had tables or were entertained at them, were Mr. and Mrs. Robert Gould Shaw, Jr., Mrs. Boylston Seal, Mr. and Mrs. Allan Forbes, Mr. and Mrs. Alfred Codman who were with perhaps the largest and smartest party; the Edwin S. W. and Russell S. Codmans, Mrs. Leonard Danielson, the James A. Parkers, Mr. and Mrs. Clifford Sawyer who were of a large party. The dance music by the Duke's orchestra was greatly appreciated.

WEDDING OF MISS BROWN AND MR. HOAR

IMPORTANT among the June weddings is that of Miss Dorothy E. Brown, a daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Franklin Q. Brown, and Mr. John Hoar, a son of the late Samuel Hoar of Concord, which will take place June 1 in the Little Episcopal Church at Dobbs Ferry on the Hudson, the Browns' country home. The Misses Phyllis and Evelyn Brown will be their sister's maids of honor, and the bridesmaids Miss Christine Snelling, whose engagement was recently announced to Mr. Leslie Coleman of Chicago, and Miss Ellen McIndoe, cousin of Miss Brown. Mrs. Margaret Thomas and Miss Charlotte Baylis of Boston, Miss Josephine Q. Smith of Baltimore, and Miss Katherine Fitch and Marjorie Vera de Ruyter of New York.

Mr. Samuel Hoar, who married Miss Helen Warren, will be his brother's best man, and the ushers will be Mr. Malcolm Peabody, whose wedding to Miss Mary Parkman takes place a few days later, Mr. Francis C. Gray, who is to marry Miss Helen Ballard in the Autumn, and Messrs. James C. Trumbull, Richard Wigginsworth, Samuel C. Bennett, Ralph Lowell and George Harding of Boston, Newell and Irvin Holton of Cleveland, Montgomery Ansell, Chaney Johnson and Clement Ford, most of these classmates of Mr. Hoar, Harvard '12. As the church is very small, only the relatives have been invited to the ceremony, but the reception which follows at "Springhurst," will be large.

MISS WESTON OF THE JUNE BRIDES

ADDED to the list of June brides is Miss Anastasia Weston, whose marriage to Mr. William Butler Duncan Dana will take place at Christ Church in Cambridge on Saturday afternoon, June 10, at 4 o'clock. Miss Weston is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Robert Dickson Weston of Fayer's ether street, Cambridge, and the sister of Mr. Robert Weston, Harvard '12; Mr. Charles Weston, who graduated the following year, and Mr. Mylville Weston, who took his A. B. degree last June and is just finishing his first year in the Law School.

Miss Weston, who is known to her more intimate friends as "Nancy," is a member of the 1914 Sewing Circle and was the first debutante of her winter to become engaged. Of her sister debutantes are Miss Hope Bancroft, who was president that year, whose marriage to Mr. Winsor is on Thursday of this week; Miss Phyllis Sears, another of the prospective June brides, her wedding to Mr. Tuckerman set for the 29th; Miss Marie Ansell, the fiancée of Mr. Cornelius Conway Felton, the wedding in September, and Miss Corinna Seale, whose engagement was announced a fortnight ago to Mr. Harold Walker and whose marriage will also be in the Autumn.

Mr. Dana is the younger son of Mr. and Mrs. Paul Dana (Mary D. Butler Duncan) of Fifth Avenue, New York. He entered Harvard with the '15 class, but finished the course in three years, taking his degree in '14. His brother is Mr. Anderson Dana, Harvard '11, and the sister, Miss Janet Perry Dana, Mr. William Butler Dana, who married Miss Blanche Haver-meyer, is an uncle, and among the cousins, all of New York, are Mr. David Duncan, a sophomore at Harvard; Miss Ruth Draper, who has given her clever monologues many times in Boston and is now on the professional stage; Mr. Charles Dana Draper, Harvard '05, Dr. George Draper, '03, who married Miss Dorothy Tuckerman; Mr. Paul Draper, Harvard '10 and Mrs. Linzee Blagden, whose husband graduated from Harvard in '08 and is a member of the Tennis and Racquet Club in Boston.

HERE AND THERE WITH PEOPLE

MR. AND MRS. LOUIS BACON are in Washington, going on for the wedding yesterday of Mrs. Bacon's sister, Miss Harriet South-land, and Mr. J. Butler Wright. A large dinner was given for them last Saturday night by Mr. and Mrs. Walter Tuckerman.

Mr. Joseph Crow, secretary of the United States embassy in Berlin, and Mrs. Crow were of those arriving in New York, Tuesday, from Copenhagen on the Frederick III, coming over to join their children, who have been all winter near their grandparents, Mr. and Mrs. Thomas S. Perry.

Mrs. William G. Weld is of the advance guard of Boston cottagers at Newport, where she arrived on Tuesday. After a few days in Boston Mrs. Richard T. Wilson returned to the Newport villa the same day.

Mrs. Stephen Van Rensselaer Thayer of Fenway is of the latest Boston arrivals at the Curtis in Lenox, where too, are Mr. and Mrs. Arthur N. Miliken, also of the Fenway. Miss Elizabeth Bohler returned to Lenox in the mid-week after several days at the Curtis.

Mrs. John L. Gardner, Mrs. Paul Thorndike and Mr. John Bargent, the arid, were of a pleasant luncheon party at the Copley-Plaza last Saturday. Mrs. Gardner was looking unexpectedly well after her long illness.

AMONG the June brides are Miss Frances E. Sherman, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Roger Sherman, 111 Little Street, Cambridge, who is to marry Francis Ferdinand Windsor on June 1, Miss Eleanor Greenleaf, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Levi Greenwood of Commonwealth Avenue, who is to wed Ralph H. Windsor on June 15 at Christ Church, Andover, and Miss Mary Parkman, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Henry Parkman of Commonwealth Avenue, who on June 19 will be one of the brides of Malcolm Endicott Peabody. Miss Parkman and Miss Greenleaf will be of the Vincent Club. Another important wedding is that of Miss Josephine Rantoul and Henry Alexander Murray, Jr., on Tuesday next at Beverly Farms. Miss Rantoul made her debut three years ago. She was vice-president of the Sewing Circle for that year.

THE THAYER FAMILIES AT LANCASTER

THE Thayer families are gathering at Lancaster for the Intermediate season. Mrs. Nathaniel Thayer is already there, and Mrs. E. V. R. Thayer closed their Beacon street house over a week ago. Mr. and Mrs. Bayard Thayer and family have been at their home for some weeks, the Beacon street house being closed earlier than usual. The Henry Forbes Hignolles are due shortly. Mr. and Mrs. Howard Russell, who, it is understood, will not return to California, where they have lived for recent years, are already there. The John E. Thayers have been all winter at the Lancaster homestead.

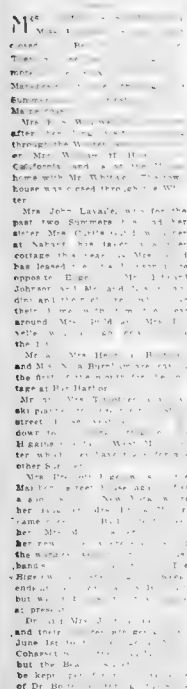

BOSTON USHERS AT NEW YORK WEDDING

MR. RICHARD WHITNEY, who came on from New York to be one of Mr. Burnham's ushers at the wedding Saturday, gave his farewell bachelor dinner at the Racquet and Tennis Club in New York Monday night. His brother, Mr. George Whitney, was his best man, and other Boston men among the ushers were Charles E. Cotting, Jr., and Mr. Archibald Blanchard. Mr. Whitney's marriage to Mrs. Stephen Stevens Sands much interested Boston people, as the bridegroom and his family have long been prominent here. It took place yesterday at the Church of the Holy Communion in New York. The reception was at the home of the bride's father, Mr. George Sheldon. Mr. Cotting is a classmate of Mr. Whitney, Harvard '11. Mr. George Whitney, who married Miss Martha Bacon, the daughter of the Ambassador to France, graduated from Harvard four years earlier than his brother.

More Truth Than Poetry

The Captured Bandit

THE bandit chief is in the toils,
His days of crime are past.
They brought him in, with all his spoils
Defiant to the last.
And easier shall we sleep at night
Who knew his dreadful fame
And always shuddered in affright
To hear his very name.

AH! what a tale his deeds would make
Could ever they be told!
What eyes would shine, what hearts would quake
What courage shrivel cold!
What startled millions would be shocked
Could they but half be guessed,
But they remain forever locked
Within the bandit's breast.

AND what shall be his punishment,
What vengeance shall we wreak
Upon this rogue, whose life was spent
In deeds we dare not speak?
Let it be something stern and dread,
But grant him one brief stay—
We'll tuck him in his trundle bed
Until another day!

Little Bobbie's Pa

By WILLIAM F. KIRK

ONE of those saviors was cruel to the house last nite & she was talking about Commencement. Her daughter is going to graduate.
My darling little Pa, and Ma's friend, it makes me sad when I think how soon she is going for to launch her bark in the sea of Life & Endeavor. She is so brave & yet so beautiful.
That makes it nice, and Pa.
Being brave is a fine thing in it self, as my friends often remark when speaking of me, and Pa, but when you combine with brains a splendid appearance, such as sum of us favored ones have, and Pa, the result is grand. My wife remarked that the first time I ever called on her, years ago, and Pa.
I suppose she was speaking of her father, or brother, and Ma's friend.
It was of the size of Pa, and Pa.
Or no, as a good brother for in a well tailored suit which was almost perfect & almost paid for, and
Pa. You remember, wife, and Pa, how well groomed I always was.
You were a vision of loveliness, and Ma. Looking at you was like trying to look five minutes at the sun.
You said it, and Pa. Why, and Pa, it doesn't seem so many years ago that all the girls not already married were looking me over. I was as courtly as a knight, and Pa.
I was sum baby.
So I gather from your conversation, and Ma's friend. That frame Being one's own worst enemy certainly never applied to you, sir. You seem to have a way of sticking to yourself then, like a thing, she said. I wish my husband could be more that way, but he came from a fine old family, & has perfect manners.
I used to be that way, too, and Pa, about my manners, but fifteen years of getting into Subway rushes has rubbed me the wrong way, and Pa, until now I am as smooth as sandpaper. It is very hard, Pa, and to be polite at all times when you live in a city as big as this. I shud like to meet my husband, and Pa.
Bring him on along next time & we will talk it over.
My husband seldom ever goes out, and Ma's friend. He is very busy rising a scientific book which he has been working on for ten years.
It must be a very dry book, and
Ma. I shud like to know more about it.
It is called The Blessing of Silence, and Ma's friend. It deals with the raising of Silencers to Britain.
I am sure it wd be very interesting to your husband, and said. Wud you believe it, she said to Ma, my husband sometimes goes for days without saying a word to me.
I see, and Pa, he is waiting for his turn.
Then the lady looked at Pa kind of hard & long, & then she got up and said, I must be running along. Do cum over soon, dear, she said to Ma, & bring that dear little child with you. She ment me, she did not mean Pa.
After she was gone, Pa said to Ma,
I think I made quite a impression on your friend.
Of course you did, your wonderful man, and Ma. How did she help nothing you. Everybody notices you, Ma said.

Nursery Versery

SING a song of silence
(The cost of our defence):
Four-and-twenty statesmen
Grosning "What expense."

When the House was opened,
They fondly thought of pork;
But not a fit for soldiers
In Texas or New York.

The grasser's in the bushes,
Smiling on his gun;
Hunting of the gringo
Gives him lots of fun.

The grasser's in the bushes,
And we are in the woods.
Don't you suppose the grasser knows
We haven't got the goods?

THERE was an old woman who lived in a shoe.
You've heard of her children, a numerous crew.
Along came the Kaiser and nodded his head;
Now some are in trenches, the others are dead.

A MAN of words and not of deeds
Believes he fills his country's needs.
For love of letters to indite,
He'd leave the nation in a plight.

THERE was a little man and he had a little gun,
And the little ancient bullets were of lead, lead, lead.
When his neighbors grew insulting he would take it all in fun.
Till they started throwing rubbish at his head, head, head.
Then he rose up in his anger with "Beware of Uncle Sam!"
Or he'd promise them a sample of his worst, worst, worst.
But the neighbors took to laughing, for they didn't care a hang.
And invited him to threaten till he burst, burst, burst.

THREE wise men of Gotham
Went to sea in a bowl,

Now the submarine commander claims he has an alibi, but the baiter is willing to disavow the act.

TOM, Tom, the piper's son,
Sold his pig to buy a gun.
He fired the gun, but he was best,
And lay down dying in Dublin street.

POOR old Robinson Crusoe!
Poor old Robinson Crusoe!
How came he afloat?
Why, they blew up his boat
(Yet denied they intended to do so).
Now a naughty U-boat
Fears no President's note,
And would readily serve me and you so.

PLEASE to remember,
One day next November,
Facilitate piffle and rot.
Make plain our meaning—
Capitol cleaning:
Politics, pork and the lot.

LITTLE Jack Horner
Walked to the corner,
Enrolled for his country to die.
While beating the drum,
They shot off his thumb,
And now he does nothing but cry.

Millionaire's Daughter in the Metropolitan Ballet

Here Are Five Pictures of Miss Eva Swain, the Only Millionaire's Daughter Who Is a "Prima Ballerina" in the Metropolitan Opera Company or Any Other

given to her less fortunate sisters. The majority of the flowers she receives are sent to the hospitals, and as proceeds of most of her appearances go to charity.

Miss Eva was only six when she attended one of the fashionable dancing classes of this city. The difficulties of the lancers and the other dances taught the pupils soon overcome, the little star astonished her master one day by proclaiming that she had made up her mind to become a famous dancer.

"Upon arriving at her tenth year she became a member of the Metropolitan Opera Company's ballet school as one of Mlle. Pascalet's private pupils. During the next three years Miss Swain had three lessons a day, Summer and Winter, so that the cost of lessons during the preliminary years amounted to fourteen hundred dollars.

"Mais que voulez-vous?" Was not the result a success? At the age of fourteen Miss Swain became "Prima Ballerina" of the Metropolitan Opera Company—the youngest of 1912-13—being not only the youngest, but also the first American girl to hold that honor.

During the next two years the little dancer completely captivated all with whom she came in contact, both before and behind the footlights. At the end of this time "Little Eva," as she was called, returned to America in order to complete her preparation for a season abroad. The war temporarily halted these plans.

FROM so many stories of poor little rich girls it is a relief to turn to one of a very rich little rich girl—Miss Eva Swain, who is at the same time daughter and heiress of the wealthy and socially prominent Mr. and Mrs. Edgar Swain, of New York, and "Prima Ballerina" of the Metropolitan Opera Company.

Miss Swain is perhaps the only professional dancer in the world who does not have to dance for a living, never at all has to dance for a living, and in all probability never will have to dance for a living. She dances for the sheer love of it and because she wanted to have—to use a much over-worked word—a "career." At the early age of seven she had definitely decided what that career was to be.

Up to date Miss Eva's dancing education has cost considerably more than fifty thousand dollars—but she is the girl of whom Mlle. Genevieve exclaimed: "I shall never desert the dancing stage for any one except her!" Naturally, it took a little rich girl to be able to carve out a career with such costly tools.

Her particular toe work, for instance, in which she excels, requires new slippers for each appearance, and the weekly bill for this item averages fifty dollars. The same quality of slippers are used in rehearsals as in the regular performances. The expense account coming under the head of ballet dresses made a low record one month recently. It was only four hundred and fifty dollars! Her paraphernalia—dresses and slippers—once worn are always immediately

The Kiss that Closed a Theatre

How the Wicked Little Germ That Causes Tonsillitis Made Its Way from Geraldine Farrar to Lou Tellegen— to Olive Tell—Thus Proving That the Joy of a Kiss Does Not Sterilize It Nor Does Its Staginess Make Its Dangers Less Real

He Just Folded Mrs. Farrar in His Arms and Did What Science Had Warned Against, What the Doctors Had Forbidden—He Kissed Her. And the Wicked Little Germ Laughed Gaily.

On the Right, a Microscopic Photograph of the Pneumococci Germ, One of the Causes of Tonsillitis.

WHEN this story was first started it was about a wicked little microbe that lodged itself in Geraldine Farrar's costly and patrician throat—her tonsils, to be accurate—and caused that talented and beautiful prima donna, who is also a recent bride, to cancel a concert tour that would have netted her several thousands of dollars and hurry back to New York for treatment.

But no sooner was the story started than it was "Stop!" and a person interested in the case, rushing past late into the office "Stop!" and the full ravages have spread. Lou Tellegen and it now. He is down with it, his tonsils and the theatre has got to be closed.

That, of course, made the story more interesting and wider in its scope. Lou Tellegen is the romantic husband of the beautiful Farrar. There was only one probable way Lou-Tellegen could have gotten the same microbe, and it was by kissing his bride—a perfectly proper and praiseworthy thing for him to do.

An investigation proved that what was suspected had happened. After a period of five days the incubation of the germ called on the wings of a kiss. A fate Geraldine in her husband had won, and the bridegroom was stricken.

The Most Rapturous Kisser on the Stage.

All of this was exceedingly interesting, but while the dangers of Mr. Lou-Tellegen—were being detailed, the same interested observer again hurriedly dashed in upon the writer—"Stop!" he cried, as before, "Olive Tell has got it now."

"Got what?"

"The germ that Lou-Tellegen got."

"The same germ?" was feebly asked.

"Exactly the same germ," he replied emphatically.

And it was true. A nasty, promiscuous little germ—known technically to the medical profession as "pneumococcus" had passed, in beautiful parades, from Geraldine to Lou to Olive.

Miss Olive Tell, by the way, is Mr. Tellegen's leading lady in "The King of Nowhere." In the last act of this play Lou-Tellegen gives Miss Tell a rapturous, prolonged and altogether complete kiss—a kiss which, while being merely a stage kiss, has all the semblance of a real one.

It was through this stage kiss that the little germ made its progress, as its predecessors had done, from Lou-Tellegen to Miss Tell by means of the clinking lips.

While these kisses proved temporarily disastrous to the health and well-being of those concerned and to Mrs. Farrar's concert tour and the run of the highly successful play, they proved of both romantic and scientific value.

The honeymoon of Miss Farrar and Lou Tellegen had continued gloriously into the Metropolitan City season closed, Mrs. Farrar started on a concert tour. While the bridegroom remained in New York to play the leading role in "The King of Nowhere," Mrs. Farrar went to Boston to sing.

Madam Butterfly. A damp chill wind was blowing about Boston Common when the lovely prima donna arrived in that city. On the morning following her arrival, April 9, the prima donna awoke with a painful sensation in her throat.

She spoke, testing her voice, and to her dismay found it was husky and hoarse. Flaring her fingers upon her swanlike neck she found that the glands were swollen. Now any sensible woman would probably prefer lambs, swollen ankles, or nose-bleeds to a sore throat. Hastily she summoned a doctor specialist.

When the specialist arrived at the hotel he told the singer to open her mouth, and then placed upon her tongue the silver instrument resembling a shoe-brush.

"Say ah-ah-ah," the specialist frowned and shook his head. "It's too bad, Mrs. Farrar, too bad," he continued. "I bought tickets for myself and family for 'Madame Butterfly.' I am very sorry."

"You do not mean?"

"I am very sorry, but I do indeed! If you think," he said as they were on their way to her home, No. 18 West Seventy-fourth street, is a taxi cab, "don't you think it would be better for you to stay at a hotel? We must be careful, you know."

"Say at a hotel—nonsense! Now that you think I want to be with you."

"What the Boston specialist said!"

What the Boston specialist said was not repeated. For again in sheer defiance Lou Tellegen challenged science with a kiss.

In a moment she was in his arms. But with one hand she pushed aside his face. "Don't—don't," she whispered, huskily. "Not, my dear," protested her fond but baffled husband.

"I've got tonsillitis," she exclaimed, "and the doctor says it's infectious."

Lou Tellegen laughed—laughed as lovers always laugh at danger.

"Bah," he exclaimed impatiently. "Doctors! What do doctors know?" And being strong he just folded Mrs. Farrar in his arms and did what science has warned against, what the doctors had forbidden.

But Mrs. Farrar was worried. "Don't you think," she said as they were on their way to her home, No. 18 West Seventy-fourth street, is a taxi cab, "don't you think it would be better for you to stay at a hotel? We must be careful, you know."

few days and isolate yourself."

"Isolate myself?" protested the bridegroom. "My wife has had tonsillitis and she is recovering."

"Nevertheless," said the doctor, even if she is on the way to recovery she can be reinfected. She may infect you, and while she is recovering herself may be in turn reinfected by you. Do you know that the pneumococcus can reinflect and infect and infect? It is a germ that works an endless chain method."

Mr. Tellegen wanted to know what the pneumococcus was. The doctor explained that it is a germ that seeks its home in the human tonsils and there propagates its kind in endless numbers. It is so contagious that it is a germ that has no respect for the station or condition of people, and seeks to continue its devastating journey from human being to human being by all sorts of adroit means. It can be communicated by a handshake, it floats in the air. It waits for its prey in drinking cups. But the most effective transmission is by means of the kiss. Mr. Lou-Tellegen was solemnly warned against kissing his wife.

To himself Mr. Lou-Tellegen admitted that he was vanquished. He had defied the microbes, but the microbes had prevailed. He had found how vulnerable is the armor of love to a germ that you cannot even see.

For four days, in obedience to the doctor's orders, Mr. Tellegen isolated himself for four days the Thirty-ninth Street Theatre was closed, and Mr. Tellegen lost his share of the receipts of five performances of "The King of Nowhere," which approximated $2,500. Meanwhile, Mrs. Farrar recovered and by Monday, Mr. Lou-Tellegen was sufficiently well to play his part in that night's performance.

Mr. Tellegen congratulated himself that his wife had recovered and that the pneumococcus had been no more severe upon him. But to and behold, three nights later, while Mr. Tellegen was dressing for his part, about fifteen minutes before time for the curtain to rise, a messenger arrived at the theatre with a revulsion addressed to the manager.

"Miss Olive Tell is laid up with the sore throat and can't act," Mr. Tellegen was told. "The understudy will play her part."

That night his voice was slightly husky as he made love on the stage. At the Wednesday matinee he realized the seductive timbre of his voice had entirely gone and some times the audience seemed to heave and swirl about him. His throat hurt, his forehead burned with fever. That night he decided to consult a physician.

"You've a bad attack of tonsillitis," said the doctor. "You must go to bed for a few days and isolate yourself."

"Isolate myself?" protested the bridegroom. "My wife has had tonsillitis and she is recovering."

"Nevertheless," said the doctor, even if she is on the way to recovery she can be reinfected. She may infect you, and while she is recovering herself may be in turn reinfected by you. Mr. Lou-Tellegen bowed his head sadly. That, then, was the cost of his impetuous kiss!

Of course, the true case herein related is not a singular one by any means. It simply illustrates what scientists have long taught, and what lovers have believed or ignored for many years. Scientists have claimed that all sorts of diseases are carried by the kiss, that the kiss is one of the easiest methods of infection. Scientists have claimed that thousands of deaths have been due to germs transmitted by needless occasion. If the danger of the kiss is admitted and proven, shall we seek substitutes? What shall they be? Shall gallants confine their ardor to kissing a lady's hands? That method will be comparatively safe—at least, declare the scientists, if the lady thus kissed washes her hands before conveying food to her mouth.

Or shall lovers impress a fond and tender kiss upon the eyelids of the lady of their heart? But, ah, declared the scientists, the eye is peculiarly susceptible to certain infections, and such a kiss might be followed by a cold in the eye. Of course, there are the cheeks and neck—but again scientists say the only safe precaution under such circumstances would be for the fair one to wipe off the portion thus kissed with a sterilized handkerchief.

The impressing of a kiss in a lady's hair has all the sanction of romance—it is an established form of showing one's affection. Scientists say, however, that germs find refuge in the hair, and that as a woman's luxuriant locks roll about on her pillow at night her lips might pick up the germ that has been lurking in her tresses. This would surely be a delay of infection.

Considering the horrible doom that confronts lovers, is it possible that kissing will ever be given up altogether? Or will jealous lovers compromise and adopt a use of sterilizing tablets? "Will you give me a kiss, Mary?" a lover will ask under such circumstances. "Yes, if you have brought a bottle of antiseptic tablets with you, John." Doctors say that if this caution were adopted the prevalence of sore throats, diphtheria, pneumonia and other diseases would decrease to a minimum. But will this ever be?

The Absurdity of Making Prisons Attractive to Criminals

The Duke of Manchester Explains the Benefits to Society of Making the Criminal Suffer in Proportion to His Villainy Instead of Turning Prisons Into "Havens of Rest"

A Group Including Murderers, Burglars and Other Criminals Amid Pleasant Surroundings in Sing Sing, Knitting Ladies' Sweaters and Doing Other Fancy Work. The Duke of Manchester Regards This as an Illustration of the Error of "Making Prison Pleasant."

By His Grace the Duke of Manchester

I should like to protect myself against criminals! I should like to know the best and most humane method of doing so. I have no sympathy for the criminal that many Americans appear to have.

I believe in the old-fashioned idea that criminals ought to be made to suffer for their crimes. The new idea that a prison should be made a pleasant place of rest and reform, a sort of country club—seems to me pernicious. It is punishment that deters most people from committing crimes, and the punishment should be made severe enough to be a deterrent. A pleasant "punishment," it is obvious, can only lead to increase in crime.

It may be inherent British prejudice, but I must say that our system approaches more nearly my idea of perfection than even the present American system, let alone other countries, such as Dr. A. Warren Stearns, say that penitentiaries consider is the right method of treating prisoners. According to him about 90 per cent of convicts would be put in hospital and doctored!

First of all, let us take it as an axiom that society may protect itself. I believe even that is disputed, but I think it is a good one at any rate, will agree. Then, we can go on to see what measures they should take.

Dr. Stearns' method is apparently to take the criminal who is a danger to society in a nice cheerful hospital and say: "Now, don't you worry, and be fed up and rest till you are all right. I'll then all you will have to do is to say, 'I'm glad to be in good now,' and you will be allowed to go out and sustain on your character."

The second method is to admit that prison should have a two-fold object—that of supplying a place where the criminal is, for a greater or less period, where he can do no harm, and, second, something the prospect of which would act as a deterrent to him and other possible criminals.

It is true that I would discriminate very carefully between the first offender and the habitual criminal. The English Judicial Code provides for that with the Borsalotti system.

I should also grade the sentences according to the degree of severity against those who commit crimes of violence than those who committed property only. But within those limits I should like a prison a place which would be far from a haven of rest for the criminal.

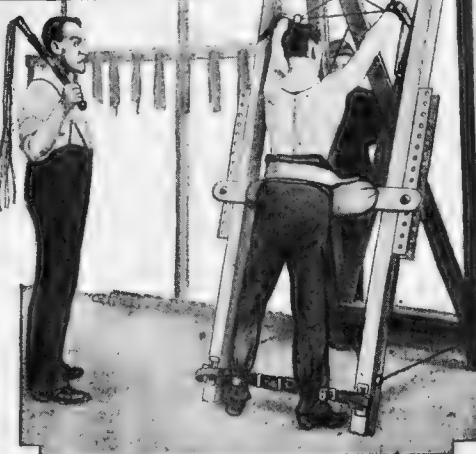

The prison reformer will retort that punish must be a deterrent and will point out that crime can be kept at bay by the harsh prison laws of old days. That I believe is due to the uncertainty of detection, and not to proper respect for prison. The criminal was not made a chance of escaping detection and if he did, it was not with the consequences as best he might make out for himself.

I have seen a picture of a hospital for prison you will find it more pleasant than the criminal with a reward for his services in the shape of better and better food—a very human idea. And a better home and better food than the majority of honest people have—that would be a basis of trust that drives honest folk to lawlessness to secure what the State denies them while they are in prison.

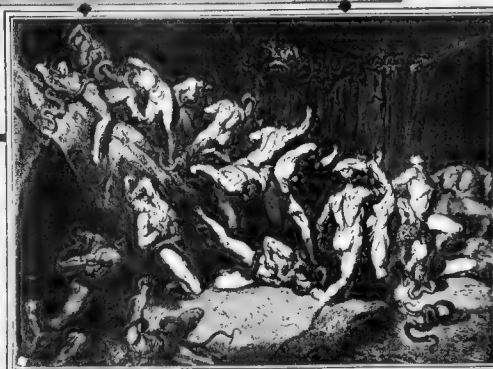

To say that punishment has no effect is untrue and absurd. The gaolers in London were never put down till the rat-nine tails was employed and the mere threat of its revival stopped the hooligan outbreak a few days ago.

I do not for a moment suggest, of course, brutality for newspaper accounts, it had been a moral club of a luxurious order, consisting of a crime against the people of New York State.

To read of twenty-one criminals being tried before a court of fellow criminals, in the day of a prison, the usual place of trial, was too far from the idea that they should be tried for crime. The prison, found guilty, and the usual place of trial, was too far from the idea that they should be tried for crime. The prison, found guilty, and the usual place of trial, was too far from the idea that they should be tried for crime.

This is a fine object lesson in the results of relaxing prison discipline. Substitute nurses for guards; take away the power to punish; and the power to punish remains and a prison, I think, would be a fine place to cure moral objects. If it would be an asylum go on if discipline, as I strongly enforced discipline, were removed! How would it take before there would be a copy of Poe's "The Cat-o'-Nine-Tails and Professor Feather!" Not more than a week, I am sure, if as long.

I read Dr. Stearns' article of December 19, 1915, and an account of the Osborne trial on March 14, 1916, proving a study in theory and practice which is wonderfully illuminating. I feel sure that Dr. Stearns will answer that the prisoners were not properly sorted out and under proper medical supervision. Doctors invariably have great faith in medical supervision.

It is true they cure epilepsy when they do sort it out. But it is a pity that they can't cure the desire for drink from the alcohol. I don't believe it and at best the system he proposes does not attempt to deter. I admit that for some cases there may be other remedies than punishment for crime, but the penologist's whole theory is based on the idea that the majority of criminals have subnormal minds, either naturally or caused by the use of drugs or other means. It is a pity that the system he proposes does not attempt to deter.

Now in the matter of intelligence the surest appeal is to the primitive mind, and, in primitive communities to the primitive mind, and, in primitive communities to the primitive mind, and, in primitive communities to the primitive mind.

The Amir of Afghanistan, when he was in India, had a review held in his honor at Agra. There were about thirty thousand British troops on parade and everything passed off splendidly; yet the Amir's face grew angrier and angrier and when the whole thirty thousand advanced in line at the end, he hurried to his carriage and drove off to the nearest telegraph station. His suite, meanwhile, looked panic-stricken. At the station he dispatched a telegram to Kabul and came out looking better.

I afterward became friendly with him and one day asked him about the whole episode. He then told me that his commander-in-chief had been sent abroad before to report on the British army, and, in the usual Oriental way, had said it was no good and not to be counted on. The Amir's face grew angrier and angrier and when the whole thirty thousand advanced in line at the end, he hurried to his carriage and drove off to the nearest telegraph station. His suite, meanwhile, looked panic-stricken. At the station he dispatched a telegram to Kabul and came out looking better.

As he nearly explained, "He shall have no chance to lie twice to Suraj u Mulla in Din."

Before I left India I found out that the Amir was really a kindly man at heart, yet his punishments to his subjects were sometimes ferocious. I asked him why this was and he told me that he hated having to do it but that his life would not be worth a week's purchase if he didn't. Some of his predecessors had tried being merciful and the Afghan people thought them weak.

"In Afghanistan," he said "we now see that when you hit once if they are caught. It is the hope of not being caught tempts them to sin at all."

His Majesty had learned how to deal with the subnormal intellect.

Needless to say, I am not suggesting mouth sewing for larks in the western countries, because I believe the wire supply would give out, but it gives an allegorical suggestion of dealing firmly with subnormal intelligence.

On the other hand, of course, a certain amount of trust is not misplaced with some types of criminals. I was met by a hooligan named by the Louisiana State farm, but they had only a few months to serve and were very exceptional types of criminals to start with. One had killed a man in a fight and the other was also a first, and I feel sure, only time offender.

Also I remember in Spain having a man pointed out to me in a cafe who was to be executed in the morning and was let out on parole for the evening to say good-bye to his family. He went back at the appointed hour.

Next week the Duke of Manchester will write on "The Necessity of Luxuries."

As you swim, you will feel a burning in your legs, especially if you are not used to swimming. This is because your muscles are working hard to keep you afloat. The water is also very cold, which can make you feel even more tired. But don't worry, this is all part of the process. The more you swim, the more your body will adapt to the water. You will feel less tired and more comfortable. The water will become your friend, and you will be able to swim for longer periods of time. So, keep swimming, and you will see the results. The water is your ally, and you are the victor.

The Young Archduchess Isabella, Who Ran Away From Her Royal Husband and Will Marry a Plain Doctor.

and most of her fortune. All this she is glad to sacrifice for love.

Probably, too, she will have to leave Austria and Germany many after the war. When the Archduke Leopold Salvator wished to live a simple life with a mistress of his choice, he was expelled from Switzerland. When the Archduke John grew sick of a pompous court life, he was expelled from Vienna.

The Archduchess is a daughter of the Archduke Franz of Austria, a near relative of the Emperor, and at present holds one of the most important commands in the Austrian army. The Archduke is now considered the richest man in Austria, next to the Emperor, partly on account of his enormous land possessions in the Tyrol and in the Bohemian and Moravian provinces. He is the father of six attractive daughters, who play an important part in the gay and aristocratic life of Vienna.

The fifth daughter, the Archduchess Isabella Marie, was betrothed in 1911 to her cousin Prince Francis of Bavaria and a grandson of the Emperor of Austria. She is the latest addition to the Archduchess Gisela, the members of the Austrian and Bavarian reigning families, and is on a daily intimacy with

He was the largest in his family, and his features were strikingly attractive. He was stated in his favor that he was the best middle-weight boxer in the Bulgarian army, that, being made the privates of his royal rank, he frequently indulged in his sports with considerable success, and even with rougher characters, and that his nose and eyes bore traces of these manly sports.

In some way the Archduchess became aware that her pugilistic nance was not a desirable husband. She struggled to get out of the marriage, but in vain, for the imperial authority had decided that she must take place. The date was set for February 12, 1912.

The great archducal peace in Vienna was busy with preparations for the wedding.

"My wedding gown has been destroyed and it will be impossible for me to be married," said the young Archduchess. "I have no more time to lose. I must go to my father's room and beg him to sign a decree annulling my marriage."

"Yes, you must be married to-day," said the first clothes man to her, "said the first hairdresser to her. The urgency of the imperial house requires it."

A white dress of suitable size was obtained in half an hour. The dressmaker and the wedding organ of the appointed time in the imperial room of the apartment of the young Archduchess. The valets and footmen, seated in every attitude of attention, waited for the young couple.

The young couple started out on the honeymoon. In three days she returned to her father's room. "I have no more time to lose," she said. "I must go to my father's room and beg him to sign a decree annulling my marriage."

She had run away from her husband and obtained release to return to him. "I have no more time to lose," she said. "I must go to my father's room and beg him to sign a decree annulling my marriage."

A magnificent palace had been prepared in Munich, the capital of Bavaria, for Prince George and his bride, but a few days before the wedding the king, in the name of his Imperial and royal relatives, wrote to inform the bride that she was not permitted to marry her husband, but without success. She was far more determined than she had been before, and she refused to give up the prospect of wedded life had had such sharp experience of her that she was willing to sacrifice anything rather than to be reverted to the Prince.

Prince George was angry and resentful, but he was not a man who would compromise he used every inducement to make his wife return to him. Then, as this failed, he hoped to win her back by force from the Supreme Court of Bavaria on January 17, 1913. The divorce was granted, but the marriage was annulled on the explanation of a royal prince and the evidence upon which it was granted was "insufficiently clear." It was not the fundamental differences of character

A religious nullification was necessary to give complete freedom to the couple. On January 17, 1916, the marriage was

As soon as she had obtained freedom from her marriage contract the young Archduchess gave proof of her courageous and independent character. She became a student and nurse at the Vienna General Surgical Hospital in Vienna. Before this Archduchess who had been separated from her husband had been married to a man who was the ruler of the Hittorfherse house as severe. The nurses and pupils are required to be on duty at 6 o'clock in the morning and to be on duty until 10 o'clock upon all hours of the night and day.

The cases are all very difficult ones. The medical staff selecting the patients from among the women who are sent to Vienna hospitals. The nurses are carefully called upon to witness operation.

It takes strong nerves to assist at an operation. The young woman who was doubly so for a girl who had been nurtured in the luxurious and artificial

The nurses were naturally curious to see how the Archduchess Isabella Marie would take this life. She worked just like the rest of them. She took the name of Sister Ingard, and refused to accept any privileges on account of her rank. She mingled with her fellow workers on friendly terms, and spent much of her leisure time on the flat roof of the hospital, which is laid out as a garden. The sisters are allowed a day away from the hospital once a week, and this was all the leave the Archduchess obtained.

One of the objects of this hospital is to train nurses for Red Cross work in war

As a nurse, Archduchess completed her training at the Imperial School of Nursing in Vienna, and worked as a nurse. When the present war broke out she immediately became a nurse. She organized a nursing school for women, and supervised a nursing staff of her own and gave them financial aid. She also gave her subjects financial aid as well as her personal services to the soldiers. In the great need of the war she was called to Austria, she has been of enormous help to the sufferers. There has not only been no shortage of nurses, but thanks to doctors, but there has been a cruel lack of material needed in surgical treatment. All the Archduchess has done is to employ a large number of nurses to obtain these necessities for her patients.

In the course of these labors she has been called upon to do the most difficult work, a capable but unassuming woman. She proved the ablest nurse in the world. She has a heart of gold, a strong core. Her ability, her quickness, her self-reliance were a revelation of human power to her.

Giuseppe is assigned many strange reasons for her separation from her royal husband. Some of these are doubtless merely scandal but one evident fact was that the Archduchess displayed a quite incredible indifference to the needs of such a young couple on her part will not seem surprising to those who understand the difference between court life and democratic human relations. The Emperor, subjected to a martyrdom, from which the poorest American girls are exempt. The princesses are brought up to be abnormally ignorant and foreign. The fact that those who educate the Archduchesses of Austria is to conceal from their pupils the fact that there are two sexes in the

The princess thus educated sends her fiancés, usually at a very early age, to the capital to marry some prince, perhaps a foreigner, and to take up their residence in the palace. The education has been of course, the opposite of that which we have described. The princess has no license and opportunity for self-education, and must be educated in accordance with that allowed to inherit the throne.

The average princess accepts her fate as meekly as a maiden of ancient Athens sacrificed to the Minotaur. The force of family authority is stronger than in our country, and she has more than the latter. While mature royal women have broken away from their slavery, they have not done so in the same way as we, who have defied authority and tradition as a crime. Archduchess Isabella Marie has done so in her life, but she has not been able to break away from the traditional conservatism she acquired a new and wholesome view of the value of human relations. This new education has diminished the influence of the church, and the influence of the governors who had turned their own employed to instill ignorance in

But the Archduchess felt quite under the influence of this remarkable man. His aversion to matrimony vanished. In Germany she fell in love.

Suddenly she announced to the imperial family that she was going to marry Dr. Albrecht. Of course, they were shocked to death. In the midst of war and horror. To drive away a royal husband and then to marry a common doctor! It was unthinkable.

But the Archduchess has formed the habit of having her own way. Even the imperial family now recognizes that. She will marry her doctor and she will completely give up her rank, title, palace and income and, if necessary, leave the empire and go to America.

Pancakes and Chin Veils

One of the New "Pancake" Hats with the Chin Veil
("Lucile" Model)

LADY DUFF-GORDON, the famous "Lucile" of London, and foremost creator of fashions in the world, writes each week the fashion article for this newspaper, presenting all that is newest and best in styles for well-dressed women.

Lady Duff-Gordon's Paris establishment brings her into close touch with the centre of fashion.

Lady Duff-Gordon's American establishments are at Nos. 37 and 39 West Fifty-seventh street, New York, and No. 1400 Lake Shore Drive, Chicago.

("LUCILE")

RECENTLY I showed you the very wide hats and the hats with the "eyelash" brims. It is a hat, one of the most modish of the season—that is entirely different. It has been called the "Pancake," because, of course, of its flattened-down look.

The large picture shows the philosophy of these hats to perfection. Notice the perfect curve and how the curve defines the whole "athletic" of the head. Such hats are not for the woman with a long thin face. They belong to the latest round-faced, petite type of girl. I have often wondered why women do not pay more attention than they do to wearing a kind of hat that interprets their particular charm. There seems to be a fatal fascination about a bonnet that carries a woman's otherwise excellent judgment. It takes them three or four days as a rule, to awaken to the fact that the hat that is so beautiful in itself is not becoming to her. This statement I have said is not for all women, however, as it is. Notice the delightful and attractive arrangements of the veiling around the chin.

Down in the left-hand corner is another "Pancake" hat of a different type. The little bow that finishes the modification of the old "under the chin ribbons" keeps down a bit of lace which is fastened to the brim.

And on the right is a kind of dress that goes well with this little hat—just a simple little Summer dress.

And, by the way, the Summer furs must match, in the coloring of their linings at least, the color of your dresses. The short hair polts naturally lend themselves admirably to the development of such Spring "furnishings." There are stoles of Hudson seal and of minkskin, as well as of ermine, and wonderful scarfs are offered in cross fox, white fox and the silver variety.
